The Venice Museum is housed within the historic 1927 Triangle Inn. Have you visited our history museum lately?

NEWS FROM HISTORICAL RESOURCES

HARRY KLINKHAMER
HISTORY TSAR,
DIVISION OF HISTORICAL RESOURCES

We have entered the high season and things are sure getting busy around here. Our latest exhibit Financing a City: The History of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is open and receiving good attention.

Opening February 3 will be our new photo exhibit, We're Staying the Night: The Historic Hotels of Venice. Both of these exhibits are for gearing up for the city's upcoming centennial.

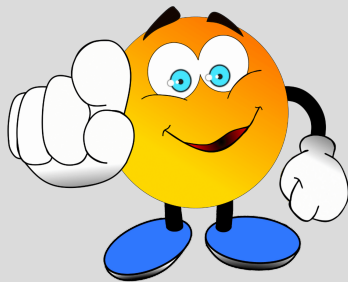

Thanks to several of our volunteers who were able to beautify the outside of the Venice Museum a little with some new plantings. This is in anticipation of more work to be done later this year with the completion of the Old Betsy Museum.

And speaking of the Old Betsy Museum, work is progressing quickly on this new home for our 1926 American LaFrance Pumper. The cinderblock shell is complete and the building is under roof. No word yet on a ribbon cutting, but it should be sometime this spring. We are also working on the interpretation of Old Betsy for when the truck gets housed in its new home.

If you are in town, consider exercising your body and mind by joining us on one of our seasonal tours. You can walk and learn about the history and architecture near downtown, the Venezia Park National Historic District, Edgewood National Historic District, or bicycle through the post-John Nolen era of Venice. Get more information on our website www.venicemuseum.org.

And finally, if you've visited the Venice Museum - or even if you haven't - we would like to encourage you to participate in a national museum visitor survey we are taking part in. This survey takes about 9 minutes and asks you how often you visit, why you visit, and who you visit with. If you don't visit, that's important too. So please share your opinion. VENICE WAYBACK MACHINE

OUR TIME MACHINE WENT SEARCHING FOR INTERESTING RECENT EVENTS

THE PARK VIEW HOTEL OPENED ON FEBRUARY 11, 1927

In June of 1926 the BLE opened its first building, the Hotel Venice. To handle the anticipated volume of real estate investors the BLE quickly started constructing the Park View, which was based on the same blueprints as the Hotel Venice.

During the Depression Dr. Fred Albee converted the vacant hotel into the Florida Medical Center, which provided needed jobs and commerce for Venice. During WW2 the hospital served the Army Air Corp Base. After the war the Park View resumed being a hotel under a succession of different names.

In 1965 a dubious decision was made to raze the historic Park View Hotel to build the Venice Post Office, a bland institutional building that poorly fits the Mediterranean character of our downtown historic district.

With the creation of the Architectural Review Board in 1987, such a mismatch would (hopefully) be disallowed today.

A 1926 BLE billboard advertised a Venice real estate sales office in the Park View Hotel.
Notice the Venice Company logo in the center

It is not a coincidence that the current Venice Centennial Logo is similar to the billboard logo seen above, also to the versions on the right. This modern logo was modeled after the historic examples.

LET'S TAKE ANOTHER TRIP

FRED & LOUELLA ALBEE
ARRIVE IN VENICE AREA
FEBRUARY 22, 1917

On this date Fred and Luella Albee arrived in Sarasota on a snowbird vacation. It took two days to get there on the Seaboard Airlines Railroad "Homesteader's Special" from New York. The fare was $25 round trip each but likely the Albee's paid extra for a Pullman Car.

Dr. Albee loved Florida immediately. By the time he left, only eight days later, the Doctor had purchased a large parcel of land from the Palmer holdings, then largely owned by Bertha Palmer's sons Honore and Potter. That parcel included all of Nokomis, which includes the area we now know as Bay Point, along with the land that the historic portion of Venice is now located. In short order he hired John Nolen as city planner. Less than one year later Dr. Albee sold the Venice Project to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

In February 1925 the Albee's decided to take a break from the New York winter and established Nokomis as their permanent residence. This started the chain of events leading to modern day Venice.
